MCWILLIAMS
GETS 3 YEARS

Negro who Entered Home of Jacob Strang after Midnight Given Heavy Penitentiary Sentence. Jackson and Monroe on Probation

William McWilliams was this morning sentenced in Adams County Court to undergo a sentence of three years imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for entering at night the residence of Jacob Strang with the intent of committing a felony.

The man was found in the residence of Mr. Strang several weeks ago and pleaded guilty. He claimed his home was in Spotsylvania, Virginia, and that he did not know how he got into the Strang house. He was represented by Edward A. Weaver Esq., who said that the man lived nearby and had gotten into the wrong house on his way home.

The next cases taken up were those against Upright Jackson and Norman Monroe who pleaded guilty to the larceny of coal from the cars of the Western Maryland railroad. The Commonwealth was represented by District Attorney Neely while Charles S. Duncan Esq. spoke in behalf of the Western Maryland Railroad.

Mr. Duncan said that the coal stealing had become a business and that some residents of town, both white and colored, every Winter stole coal by the wholesale from the cars along the Round Top siding. He said that it was known now that one resident of Gettysburg had his cellar full of stolen coal which he would retail during the Winter months. Mr. Duncan said that some Baltimore parties came here every Fall and carried on the business during the Winter months, returning to Baltimore in the Spring. Mr. Duncan asked the Court to do something which would stop the coal stealing permanently, declaring that the losses to the company had run up into thousands of dollars.

J. Donald Swope Esq. represented the defendants and, after calling the attention of the Court to their previous good record, showed that Jackson was out of money and was not able to earn any for some time. In the face of this and the illness of his wife he stated out with his brother-in-law, Monroe, one morning to pick coal along the tracks. They could find none and in desperation took a bushel from a car. They were caught and held for Court. Mr. Swope showed that they had not started out with the intention of stealing, that it was their first offense and that the conditions were unusually peculiar.

Judge Swope put both on probation for a year after receiving their promises that they would refrain from stealing in the future and would also help the company to apprehend other offenders.

William Stanton was sentenced to two months in the county jail for having been found guilty of the same offense. The Court said that he imposed sentence on him, when he had not on the others, because he had perjured himself and gotten his family to do likewise.

Judge Swope then declared that the coal stealing would have to stop and that any others convicted in the future of such offense would be given a Penitentiary sentence unless conditions were most peculiar.

The two Italians found guilty on Saturday were not sentenced, motion having been made by their counsel, Edward A. Weaver Esq., for a new trial.

NEW DIPHTHERIA CASES.

Abbotstown—Dr. L. A. Roth, state health officer of Jackson and Paradise townships, has closed the school at Holtzswain, in the latter township, taught by J. K. HAD FIRE ON
DAY OF SALE

Charles B. Mundorff Loses Outbuilding Containing All His Harness. Quantity of Meat and Many other Articles in Midnight Blaze.

Cashtown Nov. 15—Charles B. Mundorff, of Franklin township, had the hard luck early Saturday morning of having an outhouse burn with a large number of the things which he intended to offer at public sale later in the day. Notwithstanding this, his sale was an exceptionally good one.

The building which burned contained among other things all of the harness in Mr. Mundorff's possession. When it came to selling horses the man had to lead them out without bridle but the large number who attended the sale soon helped him out of his predicament. The horses brought good prices as did also the cows. One horse brought $215 and a cow $80.00.

The meat of a large fat hog which had been butchered on Wednesday of last week was one of the things to burn. The butchering had taken place in the building which burned and it is thought that some of the coals from Wednesday's work set the building on fire shortly after midnight Saturday morning.

The flames had gained good headway when discovered and it was impossible to save the many articles which had been gathered there in preparation for the sale. The sale was very largely attended.

BUCHANAN VALLEY

Buchanan Valley Nov. 15—A. W. Cole's faithful "Shep" a fine shepherd dog went suddenly mad on Friday afternoon and he had him shot. Mr. Cole was engaged in the entry of the pig pen when he heard the dog barking under the pen. He went down to see what it had there, when the animal suddenly rushed out and ran rapidly down to the house running past the baby, Richard, who was sitting on the porch and run under the porch where it stayed. Mr. Cole mailed boards over the opening to keep it in. The dog was finally killed. Never was a dog more devoted to its master and Mr. Cole is sorry to lose him, but it was very fortunate that he was noticed in time that no one was bitten by the dog. There was a suspicious dog in the Valley about two weeks ago. Shop may have been bitten by him, but it is not known.

William Irvin and son, John and two sons, and daughter, Miss Laura, of Gettysburg, spent a day at the home of John Irvin Sr. visiting.

Misses Louise and Eleanor Brinkerhoff, of Gettysburg, spent last Thursday with their aunt Miss Sara C. Stahl.

ERECTING NEW
$10,000 BUILDING

Handsome New Structure Containing Dining Hall For Seminary Students being Erected on the Hill. Dwelling for Care Taker of Building.

Work has been started on the erection of a new $10,000 building to be added to the large number of handsome structures comprising the plant of the Gettysburg Theological Seminary. The building to be erected will be a refectory and will be about 60 feet square.

The building will be two stories in height and the entire North side will be used as a dining hall. Its dimensions will be about 60x85 feet and will have the entire height of the building, the ceiling being 16 feet high.

The South side of the building will be occupied by the family who will have the care of the building in their charge and who will have charge of the meals which will be served to the students of the institution in the dining room. The dwelling part of the structure will be in two stories.

The building which will be placed on the West side of the avenue will be of with brick brownstone trimmings and will have a granite foundation. It will present a handsome appearance and be in keeping with the other buildings at the Seminary. J. A. Dempwolf, of York, who has designed a number of the buildings in town, is the architect.

The need for such a building has long been felt by the authorities and students at the institution on the hill. It is a long walk for the Seminary to take to come to town for an early breakfast, a walk which is particularly uncomfortable when "Winter winds blow chill and cold" and the change will be much appreciated by those who are pursuing studies there.

The work is being let by the authorities at the institution, and no contract is being given out for the erection of the entire building.

WHITE RUN

White Run Nov. 15—A most peculiar incident of the season was a swarm of bees seen in Germany township one day last week.

NO DEVELOPMENTS
IN BOWERS CASE

Hunting Man to whom Biglerville Boy Gave Package Containing Large Amount of Money. Bowers Won't Tell Name.

There are no new developments today in the Bowers' $10,000 larceny case at Harrisburg. The one matter which is now engaging the attention of the Harrisburg authorities is the identity of the man who returned the package containing the $3,400 and who incidentally caused the arrest of Bowers.

But two persons can answer. They are the principal characters—the man who confessed the theft and his captor. The first won't tell. The other hasn't been asked for the simple reason that he can't be found.

Constable Charles H. Smith, who made the arrest, doesn't know. Neither does Alderman William L. Windsor, Jr., who held Bowers for court. Harry P. Long, general agent for the express company in Harrisburg, is as much in the dark as any one.

Bowers, at the conclusion of a brief, preliminary hearing was remanded to jail to await a trial by court charged with grand larceny. The hearing lasted but a few moments. The accused confessed that he had taken the $10,000 in currency with the intention of stealing it.

TONIGHT

It is safe to say Walter's Theatre, will be crowded tonight, when the well known Taylor Stock Company headed by the clever stock comedian Harry Moore, and a fine supporting company will open for a week's engagement with matinee Saturday, presenting a strong line of plays, with vaudeville acts. At popular prices, 10, 20, and 30 cents. Special scenery, costumes, music and effects are carried for all of their plays, and a treat is in store for theatre goers this week. The bill for this evening will be Ernest Lamson's Great Play "From Farm to Factory", with Harry Moore as "Toke Hoxie" the country boy. Between the acts specialties are given by Harry Moore, Ethel Henrick, John McKenna, and the Taylor Stock "Trio". Seats are now on sale. Tomorrow night "Reaping the Harvest" is announced. Plays will be changed every night.

QUITE A DIFFERENCE

With the mild summer weather that this section has enjoyed for some days, it is probable that but few people recall that Sunday one year ago the deepest snow of last winter fell.

On November 14, 1908 snow began falling about eight o'clock in the morning and continued until 9 o'clock in the evening. Then it lay eight inches deep on the ground. The greatest portion of this was contributed between 3 and 6 o'clock, when the snow fell very rapidly.

With the snow there came a drop in temperature and the night was very cold, the thermometer but a few degrees above zero.

LOST TO INDIANS

The Gettysburg College foot ball team lost a hard fought game at Carlisle on Saturday to the Indian School team on the grounds of that school, by the score of 35 to 0. The game was hard fought throughout but Gettysburg was completely outclassed. A large number of substitutes were in the Gettysburg line up but despite this the orange and blue held the red skins for downs several times within the five yard line.

Mrs. Eliza J. Harper died on October 30 at her home in Nevada, Iowa, aged 75 years. She was a native of Fayetteville and was married there to Robert M. Harper. It would seem reasonable to assume that much might be done along the line of keeping boys and girls on the farm if more pains were taken to make the rural neighborhood more attractive. In one respect particularly do we believe a great improvement might be made—that is, in the building of more attractive and commodious school-houses and the keeping of the grounds in better shape. There is little reason to wonder that the young people of a community aren't particularly impressed with the educational and social life of the district when the school facilities are so meager and so poorly maintained. They argue, whether rightly or not, that this state of things points to a virtual disregard for education on the part of patrons and directors and that a development of the head isn't worth while when it comes to achieving success in agriculture. The net result of this attitude is that those who have got the brightest minds and most energy light out when occasion offers for some place and type of work where their capacities will be given opportunity to develop. We do not hold that their action is wise. There is great provocation for it. It is becoming more evident every day that there is no field of effort where brains energetically directed will bring uniformly larger or surer rewards than in agriculture. The great need of the day is to get the boys and girls to appreciate this fact. A more wholesome and wide awake attitude on the part of the old folks who are taxpayers would help to bring this about. It is time agricultural communities appreciated the opportunities at hand and put on a better front.

ERECTING NEW $10,000 BUILDING

Handsome New Structure Containing Dining Hall For Seminary Students being Erected on the Hill. Dwelling for Care Taker of Building.

Work has been started on the erection of a new $10,000 building to be added to the large number of handsome structures comprising the plant of the Gettysburg Theological Seminary. The building to be erected will be a refectory and will be about 60 feet square.

The building will be two stories in height and the entire North side will be used as a dining hall. Its dimensions will be about 60x35 feet and will have the entire height of the building, the ceiling being 16 feet high.

The South side of the building will be occupied by the family who will have the care of the building in their charge and who will have charge of the meals which will be served to the students of the institution in the dining room. The dwelling part of the structure will be in two stories.

The building which will be placed on the West side of the avenue will be of brick brownstone trimmings and will have a granite foundation. It will present a handsome appearance and be in keeping with the other buildings at the Seminary. J. A. Dempwolf, of York, who has designed a number of the buildings in town, is the architect.

The need for such a building has long been felt by the authorities and students at the institution on the hill. It is a long walk for the Seminary students to take to come to town for an early breakfast, a walk which is particularly uncomfortable when "Winter winds blow chill and cold" and the change will be much appreciated by those who are pursuing studies there. The work is being let by the authorities at the institution, and no contract is being given out for the erection of the entire building.

NO DEVELOPMENTS IN BOWERS CASE

There are no new developments today in the Bowers' $10,000 larceny case at Harrisburg. The one matter which is now engaging the attention of the Harrisburg authorities is the identity of the man who returned the package containing the $9,900 and who incidentally caused the arrest of Bowers.

But two persons can answer. They are the principal characters—the man who confessed the theft and his captor. The first won't tell. The other hasn't been asked for the simple reason that he can't be found.

Constable Charles H. Smith, who made the arrest, doesn't know. Neither does Alderman William L. Windsor, Jr., who held Bowers for court. Harry P. Long, general agent for the express company in Harrisburg, is as much in the dark as any one.

Bowers, at the conclusion of a brief, preliminary hearing was remanded to jail to await a trial by court charged with grand larceny. The accused confessed that he had taken the $10,000 in currency with the intention of stealing it.

QUITE A DIFFERENCE

With the mild summer weather that this section has enjoyed for some days, it is probable that but few people recall that Sunday one year ago the deepest snow of last winter fell.

On November 14, 1908 snow began falling about eight o'clock in the morning and continued until 9 o'clock in the evening. Then it lay eight inches deep on the ground. The greatest portion of this was contributed between 3 and 6 o'clock, when the snow fell very rapidly.

With the snow there came a drop in temperature and the night was very cold, the thermometer but a few degrees above zero.

LOST TO INDIANS

The Gettysburg College foot ball team lost a hard fought game at Carlisle on Saturday to the Indian School team on the grounds of that school, by the score of 35 to 0. The game was hard fought throughout but Gettysburg was completely outclassed. A large number of substitutes were in the Gettysburg line up but despite this the orange and blue held the red skins for downs several times within the five yard line.

It would seem reasonable to assume that much might be done about the line of keeping boys and girls out of the farm if more pains were taken to make the rural neighborhood more attractive.

In one respect particularly do we believe a great improvement might be made—that is, in the building of more attractive and commodious school-houses and the keeping of the grounds in better shape. There is little reason to wonder that the young people of a community aren't particularly impressed with the educational and social life of the district when the school facilities are so meager and so poorly maintained. They argue, whether rightly or not, that this state of things points to a virtual disregard for education on the part of patrons and directors and that a development of the head isn't worth while when it comes to achieving success in agriculture. The net result of this attitude is that those who have got the brightest minds and most energy light out when occasion offers for some place and type of work where their capacities will be given opportunity to develop. We do not hold that their action is wise. There is great provocation for it. It is becoming more evident every day that there is no field of effort where brains energetically directed will bring uniformly larger or surer rewards than in agriculture. The great need of the day is to get the boys and girls to appreciate this fact. A more wholesome and wide awake attitude on the part of the old folks who are taxpayers would help to bring this about. It is time agricultural communities appreciated the opportunities at hand and put on a better front.

FOUND RING LOST 16 YEARS
Man's Find of Mother's Wedding Ring Recalls Boyhood Spanking.
Greenwich, Conn., Nov. 15.—Sixteen years ago little Arthur Van Guilder got a good, sound spanking for losing his mother's gold wedding ring through a crack in the floor of a house near his own. Saturday big Arthur Van Guilder, now a grown man and married, found the ring, and he would like to get restitution for that spanking, but he doesn't see how he is going to obtain it. Recently John Tatter, who owned the house, began excavating under it for a cellar. Some of the dirt was thrown out on the edge of the sidewalk. In walking along the sidewalk Mr. Van Guilder kicked a lump of dirt and out from it rolled something round. Mr. Van Guilder upon examining the object found that it was a ring, and on rubbing the dirt from it discovered his mother's initials on the inside. He hurried home, where all was verified by members of his family, but the slipper and its work have passed beyond recall.

Morgan, a fine looking young medical student of twenty-three, who came here from New York. He was not over half Dr. Bush's age, but they were constantly together. They were married in 1905, but the complaint does not state when the wife discovered her husband was not of Adam's sex.

IMPORTERS ROB U. S. OF DUTY
Leslie M. Shaw Says the Practice is General.
LOSSES RUN INTO MILLIONS
EX-Secretary of the Treasury Declares Fraud in Weighing Sugar is Only One of Many Ways the Government is Swindled.
Philadelphia, Nov. 15.—Direct from one who has held the position of secretary of the treasury, and who is, therefore, in a position to know whereof he speaks—Leslie M. Shaw, who was in the first Roosevelt cabinet—came the declaration that the gross fraud against the government in the weighing of dutiable sugar is but one instance of a general practice. It was explicitly stated by Mr. Shaw that on nearly every commodity, and in every port, including Philadelphia, there is undervaluation and underweighing which defrauds the government of millions of dollars annually. Mr. Shaw said that he had heard the amount of this loss estimated as high as $100,000,000 per annum, though he believed this to be an exaggeration. However, he said, while an estimate of the extent of the fraud is impossible, that it is great is certain. Denies He Shielded Trust. In the course of a long interview in which he went into detail into the difficulties which meet the department in apprehending the criminals who thus rob the national treasury, Mr. Shaw took occasion to deny an imputation which, he said, had been made by Special Agent Penr, who unearthed the frauds perpetrated by the sugar trust, to the effect that the "sugar people" had been protected. He declared that, in keeping Mr. Penr from beginning this work years ago, when he desired to take it up, and putting him, instead, upon wool smuggling work, there was no purpose to shield the powerful trust that has defrauded the government to an extent estimated as high as $30,000,000. Incidentally Mr. Shaw told an interesting story of years of experiment which have been conducted at the Philadelphia mint to perfect an automatic scale which will preclude the possibility of underweighing in the future. This scale, he said, is now perfected and will save the government a million dollars annually. Mr. Shaw spoke of the difficulties in the way of obtaining convictions against offenders. "It is seldom," he said, "that a government employee is crooked, but they live in an atmosphere that is unfriendly to the strict enforcement of the law. They meet no one but importers' agents and custom brokers. If they are invited to dinner or to the theater it is by the representative of an importer. Then, in addition, the administrative machinery is so complicated that when fraud is discovered it is difficult to get prompt action, and then, too, the fraudulent importers are pretty well organized. The large importers, as a rule, are honest, and we relied on them."

CRAZED IN MINE PRISON
Starving and Terrorized Man a Maniac When Discovered.
Pittsburg, Nov. 15.—Lost in the abandoned workings of the new Watson mine, near West Elizabeth, for nearly a week, without food, light or water, Charles Rodgers, about forty years old, was found by miners. He was a raving maniac from privation and fear. Searching parties who have explored the mine almost daily since he disappeared, long failed to find the missing man, and it was not until his delirium he cried out, while a number of miners were delivering posts in the abandoned section that he was found. The place where Rodgers was found was passed over at least twenty times by a searching party, and had one of them put out his hand he could not have failed to touch the missing man.

AN ODD COURTSHIP.
By M. QUAD.
Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.
The wife of Deacon Hiram Platt had been dead three years when it came to his ears that people were wondering why he didn't place a tombstone at her grave. At her death the sorrowing husband had fully intended to give her a monument thirty feet high; three months later he had reduced the height to fifteen feet; then he had gone down foot by foot until he figured that a common gravestone would be all that was expected. One may have his own ideas about such matters, but when people begin to talk he must consult the ideas of others to a certain extent. Therefore Deacon Platt hustled around to put up a stone. About the time the deacon lost his wife Mrs. Samantha Taylor, living in the same village, lost her husband. She also had a thirty foot monument in her mind, and she also scented it down to a plain, cheap stone. Further, there came a time when gossip criticized her for the unmarried grave, and she set about doing something. She had removed to another village, but gossip follows one everywhere. It thus came about one summer day, when the deacon drove out to the country graveyard to fix up things, he found the widow there for the same object. The graves of their dead were not fifty feet apart. The deacon had a look of sorrow on his face and the widow had tears in her eyes as they shook hands. "He was a noble man," said the deacon, referring, of course, to the lamented Taylor. "And she was all that a wife should be," replied the widow, referring, of course, to the lamented Mrs. Platt. "I am glad to know that you mourn him." "And I am glad to know that you mourn her." "Her time had come, and she had to go." "And the same with him." The weeds had to be cleared away and the mounds rounded up and redded and the stones set. They worked together at this. They sorrowed for about half an hour, and then it was something else. When their backs ached and they were ready to quit work for the day the deacon helped her into her buggy with the remark: "I have seemed to feel Mrs. Platt looking down on me this afternoon." "And I have felt the presence of my dear lost husband," she replied. Then they both looked very solemn, and she drove away to return on the morrow and find the deacon there before her. He repeated that her lamented was a noble man, and she repeated that his lamented was all that a wife should be. They cut down and lugged away weeds and briars and brought dirt and sods, and when they rested they sat close together on an old bench. It was during one of these resting spells that the deacon sighed three times in succession and said: "Widder Taylor, when might had come and you were sitting alone in your loneliness did you ever think it possible that you could find another man as good as George was?" "Why, while he was a noble man, there must be other noble men in the world," she replied. "Yes, widder, and other noble women, though I never had no fault to find with Hanner. I am sure we loved 'em." "Yes, we did." "And it grieved us to see them go." "It did." "But they are better off in that brighter land." Then they parted and went home, and it was noticeable that neither looked as solemn as before. They were not smiling, but the solemn looks had somehow chased themselves away. The next day was to see the end of their work, and they both got there early. The deacon seemed to press the widow's hand when he helped her out of the buggy, and she seemed a bit confused over it, but this may have been all imagination. By mid-afternoon the stones were in place, and as they retreated a few paces to survey them the deacon solemnly said: "Widder, if your lost husband can look down on earth he is seeing that stun and saying to himself that it's good enough for anybody." "Yes," she sighed, "and your Hanner must say the same thing. We could have got monuments, of course, but—"

But monuments attract lightning," flushed the deacon. "And are blown over in high winds." "And crows use them to roost on. Yes, I think our lost ones ought to feel quite chirpy. We have the best two lots here." "And they are picturesquely situated, deacon." "Then the deacon led her out to the gate and her buggy. They walked at a slow pace, and neither seemed to notice that he was holding her hand. When she had been seated in the vehicle the deacon rested a foot on the hub of a front wheel and sighed and said: "Purty lonesome for us, widder." "Yes, purty lonesome, deacon." "I think I'll drive over to see you tomorrow afternoon." "I'll be expecting you." "And we'll talk." "Yes." "And we'll talk—and talk." "We will." And three months later, when they were married, the gossips were moan about it. They said that the couple had done their courting in a grave-yard, but we know better. It was done just outside the gate.

If there are any Rheumatic victims in Gettysburg who have not availed themselves of People's Drug Store's generous offer, they ought to get busy at once. They state that if Rheuma, the new prescription for Rheumatism, does not cure any purchaser, they will return the money without any red tape. Rheumatism is a dangerous disease; because of its shifting nature it often strikes the heart and proves fatal. Any one who has a taint of it ought to drive it out as soon as possible. It is caused by sluggish, worn out or overworked kidneys, which become clogged and fail to eliminate the impurities from the system. Rheuma acts promptly and directly upon the kidneys; it cleanses them; it absolutely renovates and leaves them in perfect condition, able to do the work nature intended they should do. The price of Rheuma is only 50c a bottle. Mail orders filled by Rheuma Co., 1500 West Ave., Buffalo, N. Y.

SAGE FOR DARKENING THE HAIR
There is nothing new about the idea of using sage for restoring the color of the hair. Our great grandmothers kept their locks soft, dark and glossy by using a "sage tea." Whenever their hair fell out or took on a dull, faded or streaked appearance, they made a brew of sage leaves and applied it to their hair with wonderfully beneficial effect. Nowadays we don't have to resort to the old time firestone method of gathering the herbs and making the brew. This is done by skillful chemists better than we could do it ourselves and all we have to do is to call for the ready made product. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, containing sage in the proper strength, with the addition of Sulphur, another old time scalp remedy. This preparation is sold by all first-class druggists for 50c. and $1.00 a bottle, or is sent direct by the Wyeth Chemical Company, 74 Cortlandt St., New York City, upon receipt of price.
For sale and recommended People's Drug Store.

FOUND RING LOST 16 YEARS

Man's Find of Mother's Wedding Ring Recalls Boyhood Spanking.
Greenwich, Conn., Nov. 15.—Sixteen years ago little Arthur Van Guilder got a good, sound spanking for losing his mother's gold wedding ring through a crack in the floor of a house near his own. Saturday big Arthur Van Guilder, now a grown man and married, found the ring, and he would like to get restitution for that spanking, but he doesn't see how he is going to obtain it. Recently John Tatter, who owned the house, began excavating under it for a cellar. Some of the dirt was thrown out on the edge of the sidewalk. In walking along the sidewalk Mr. Van Guilder kicked a lump of dirt and out from it rolled something round. Mr. Van Guilder upon examining the object found that it was a ring, and on rubbing the dirt from it discovered his mother's initials on the inside. He hurried home, where all was verified by members of his family, but the slipper and its work have passed beyond recall.

Morgan, a fine looking young medical student of twenty-three, who came here from New York. He was not over half Dr. Bush's age, but they were constantly together. They were married in 1905, but the complaint does not state when the wife discovered her husband was not of Adam's sex.

IMPORTERS ROB U. S. OF DUTY

Leslie M. Shaw Says the Practice is General.

LOSSES RUN INTO MILLIONS

Ex-Secretary of the Treasury Declares Fraud in Weighing Sugar is Only One of Many Ways the Government is Swindled.

Philadelphia, Nov. 15.—Direct from one who has held the position of secretary of the treasury, and who is, therefore, in a position to know whereof he speaks—Leslie M. Shaw, who was in the first Roosevelt cabinet—came the declaration that the gross fraud against the government in the weighing of dutiable sugar is but one instance of a general practice. It was explicitly stated by Mr. Shaw that on nearly every commodity, and in every port, including Philadelphia, there is undervaluation and underweighing which defrauds the government of millions of dollars annually. Mr. Shaw said that he had heard the amount of this loss estimated as high as $100,000,000 per annum, though he believed this to be an exaggeration. However, he said, while an estimate of the extent of the fraud is impossible, that it is great is certain.

Denies He Shielded Trust. In the course of a long interview in which he went in detail into the difficulties which meet the department in apprehending the criminals who thus rob the national treasury, Mr. Shaw took occasion to deny an imputation which, he said, had been made by Special Agent Parr, who unearthed the frauds perpetrated by the sugar trust, to the effect that the "sugar people" had been protected.

He declared that, in keeping Mr. Parr from beginning this work years ago, when he desired to take it up, and putting him, instead, upon work smuggling work, there was no purpose to shield the powerful trust that has defrauded the government to an extent estimated as high as $30,000,000. Incidentally Mr. Shaw told an interesting story of years of experiment which have been conducted at the Philadelphia mint to perfect an automatic scale which will preclude the possibility of underweighing in the future. This scale, he said, is now perfected and will save the government a million dollars annually.

Mr. Shaw spoke of the difficulties in the way of obtaining convictions against offenders. "It is seldom," he said, "that a government employee is crooked, but they live in an atmosphere that is unfriendly to the strict enforcement of the law. They meet not only but importers' agents and custom brokers. If they are invited to dinner or to the theater it is by the representative of an importer. Then, in addition, the administrative machinery is so complicated that when fraud is discovered it is difficult to get prompt action, and then, too, the fraudulent importers are pretty well organized. The large importers, as a rule, are honest, and we relied on them."

CRAZED IN MINE PRISON

Starving and Terrorized Man a Maniac When Discovered.

Pittsburg, Nov. 15.—Lost in the abandoned workings of the new Walton mine, near West Elizabeth, for nearly a week, without food, light or water, Charles Rodgers, about forty years old, was found by miners. He was a raving maniac from privation and fear. Searching parties who have explored the mine almost daily since he disappeared, long failed to find the missing man, and it was not until in his delirium he cried out, while a number of miners were delivering posts in the abandoned section, that he was found.

The place where Rodgers was found was passed over at least twenty times by a searching party, and had one of them put out his hand he could not have failed to touch the missing man.

Twenty-five Lives Imperiled. Duluth, Minn., Nov. 15.—The steamer Hoyt is still on the rocks near Bayfield, Wis. Rescue parties are unable to reach the ship, although several attempts have been made. The tug Heim, of Ashland, is making another attempt at rescue. The fate of the crew of twenty-five is unknown.

Car Shortage Serious. Pittsburg, Nov. 15.—Coke operators of the Kiodyrke and Connelleville regions are at present face to face with one of the most serious handicaps in years, occasioned by a car shortage that becomes worse from day to day. Instead of showing improvement, the situation is extremely serious.

Bill Barlow of Wyoming told of one of the funniest paragraphs of his former editorial associate, Bill Nye. There had been a railroad accident. The locomotive was lost, two passenger cars were destroyed, the express car was smashed, but no one had been fatally hurt. This is the way Bill Nye described it: "For upward of twenty years repairs have been repeatedly promised the old South bridge. Hoping against hope and waiting until distracted the old bridge became discouraged at last and yesterday just laid down in the gorge with a passenger train."

AN ODD COURTSHIP.

By M. QUAD.

Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

The wife of Deacon Hiram Platt had been dead three years when it came to his ears that people were wondering why he didn't place a tombstone at her grave. At her death the sorrowing husband had fully intended to give her a monument thirty feet high; three months later he had reduced the height to fifteen feet; then he had gone down foot by foot until he figured that a common gravestone would be all that was expected. One may have his own ideas about such matters, but when people begin to talk he must consult the ideas of others to a certain extent. Therefore Deacon Platt hurried around to put up a stone.

About the time the deacon lost his wife Mrs. Samantha Taylor, living in her mind, and she also scaled it down to a plain, cheap stone. Further, there came a time when gossip criticized her for the unmarked grave, and she set about doing something. She had removed to another village, but gossip follows one everywhere. It thus came about one summer day, when the deacon drove out to the country graveyard to fix up things, he found the widow there for the same object. The graves of their dead were not fifty feet apart. The deacon had a look of sorrow on his face and the widow had tears in her eyes as they shook hands.

"He was a noble man," said the deacon, referring, of course, to the lamented Taylor.

"And she was all that a wife should be," replied the widow, referring, of course, to the lamented Mrs. Platt.

"I am glad to know that you mourn him."

"And I am glad to know that you mourn her."

"Her time had come, and she had to go."

"And the same with him."

The weeds had to be cleared away and the mounds rounded up and sodded and the stones set. They worked together at this. They sorrowed for about half an hour, and then it was something else. When their backs ached and they were ready to quit work for the day the deacon helped her into her buggy with the remark:

"I have seemed to feel Mrs. Platt looking down on me this afternoon."

"And I have felt the presence of my dear lost husband," she replied.

Then they both looked very solemn, and she drove away to return on the morrow and find the deacon there before her. He repeated that her lamented was a noble man, and she repeated that his lamented was all that a wife should be. They cut down and lugged away weeds and briars and brought dirt and sods, and when they rested they sat close together on an old bench.

It was during one of these resting spells that the deacon sighed three times in succession and said:

"Widder Taylor, when might had come and you were sitting alone in your lonesomeness did you ever think it possible that you could find another man as good as George was?"

"Why, while he was a noble man, there must be other noble men in the world," she replied.

"Yes, widder, and other noble women, though I never had no fault to find with Hanner. I am sure we loved 'em."

"Yes, we did."

"And it grieved us to see them go."

"It did."

"But they are better off in that brighter land."

Then they parted and went home, and it was noticeable that neither looked as solemn as before. They were not smiling, but the solemn looks had somehow chased themselves away. The next day was to see the end of their work, and they both got there early. The deacon seemed to press the widow's hand when he helped her out of the buggy, and she seemed a bit confused over it, but this may have been all imagination. By mid-afternoon the stones were in place, and as they retreated a few paces to survey their work the deacon solemnly said:

"Widder, if you lost your husband can look down on earth he is seeing that sun and saying to himself that it's good enough for anybody."

"Yes," she sighed, "and your Hanner must say the same thing. We could have got monuments, of course, but—"

"But monuments attract lightning," finished the deacon.

"And are blown over in high winds."

"And crows use them to roost on. Yes, I think our lost ones ought to feel quite chirpy. We have the best two lots here."

"And they are picturesquely situated, deacon."

Then the deacon led her out to the gate and her buggy. They walked at a slow pace, and neither seemed to notice that he was holding her hand. When she had been seated in the vehicle the deacon rested a foot on the hub of a front wheel and sighed and said:

"'Tis lonesome for us, widder."

"Yes, 'tis lonesome, deacon."

"I think I'll drive over to see you tomorrow afternoon."

SAGE FOR DARKENING THE HAIR

There is nothing new about the idea of using sage for restoring the color of the hair. Our great grandmothers kept their locks soft, dark and glossy by using a "sage tea." Whenever their hair fell out or took on a dull, faded or streaked appearance, they made a brew of sage leaves and applied it to their hair with wonderfully beneficial effect. Nowadays we don't have to resort to the old time tiresome method of gathering the herbs and making the brew. This is done by skillful chemists better than we could do it ourselves and all we have to do is to call for the ready made product. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, containing sage in the proper strength, with the addition of Sulphur, another old time scalp remedy. This preparation is sold by all first-class druggists for 50c. and $1.00 a bottle, or is sent direct by the Wyeth Chemical Company, 74 Cortlandt St., New York City, upon receipt of price.

For sale and recommended People's Drug Store.

MUCH RHEUMATISM

People's Drug Store's No Cure No-Pay Offer in the Gettysburg Times Attracts Many Sufferers.

If there are any Rheumatic victims in Gettysburg who have not availed themselves of People's Drug Store's generous offer, they ought to get busy at once.

They state that if Rheuma, the new prescription for Rheumatism, does not cure any purchaser, they will return the money without any red tape.

Rheumatism is a dangerous disease; because of its shifting nature it often strikes the heart and proves fatal. Any one with even a taint of it ought to drive it out as soon as possible.

It is caused by sluggish, worn out or over-worked kidneys, which become clogged and fail to eliminate the impurities from the system.

Rheuma acts promptly and directly upon the kidneys; it cleanses them; it absolutely renovates and leaves them in perfect condition able to do the work nature intended they should do.

The price of Rheuma is only 50c a bottle. Mail orders filled by Rheuma Co., 1500 West Ave., Buffalo, N. Y.

FOUND RING LOST 16 YEARS
Man's Find of Mother's Wedding Ring Recalls Boyhood Spanking.
Greenwich, Conn., Nov. 15.—Sixteen years ago little Arthur Van Guilder got a good, sound spanking for losing his mother's gold wedding ring through a crack in the floor of a house near his own. Saturday big Arthur Van Guilder, now a grown man and married, found the ring, and he would like to get restitution for that spanking, but he doesn't see how he is going to obtain it. Recently John Tatter, who owned the house, began excavating under it for a cellar. Some of the dirt was thrown out on the edge of the sidewalk. In walking along the sidewalk Mr. Van Guilder kicked a lump of dirt and out from it rolled something round. Mr. Van Guilder upon examining the object found that it was a ring, and on rubbing the dirt from it discovered his mother's initials on the inside. He hurried home, where all was verified by members of his family, but the slipper and its work have passed beyond recall.

San Francisco, Nov. 15.—Abe Ruef, former boss of Frisco, is threatened with total blindness and deafness. Ruef has been in the county jail for a little more than a year, pending an appeal of his case to the higher court. He was sentenced to fourteen years' imprisonment after having been convicted of the bribing of one of the "boodling" board of supervisors in the case of the overhead trolley franchise.

Morgan, a fine looking young medical student of twenty-three, who came here from New York. He was not over half Dr. Bush's age, but they were constantly together.

They were married in 1905, but the complaint does not state when the wife discovered her husband was not of Adam's sex.

IMPORTERS ROB U. S. OF DUTY
Leslie M. Shaw Says the Practice is General.
LOSSES RUN INTO MILLIONS
Ex-Secretary of the Treasury Declares Fraud in Weighing Sugar is Only One of Many Ways the Government is Swindled.
Philadelphia, Nov. 15.—Direct from one who has held the position of secretary of the treasury, and who is, therefore, in a position to know whereof he speaks—Leslie M. Shaw, who was in the first Roosevelt cabinet—came the declaration that the gross fraud against the government in the weighing of dutiable sugar is but one instance of a general practice. It was explicitly stated by Mr. Shaw that on nearly every commodity, and in every port, including Philadelphia, there is undervaluation and underweighing which defrauds the government of millions of dollars annually. Mr. Shaw said that he had heard the amount of this loss estimated as high as $100,000,000 per annum, though he believed this to be an exaggeration. However, he said, while an estimate of the extent of the fraud is impossible, that it is great is certain. Denies He Shielded Trust.

In the course of a long interview in which he went into detail into the difficulties which meet the department in apprehending the criminals who thus rob the national treasury, Mr. Shaw took occasion to deny an imputation which, he said, had been made by Special Agent Parr, who unearthed the frauds perpetrated by the sugar trust, to the effect that the "sugar people" had been protected. He declared that, in keeping Mr. Parr from beginning this work years ago, when he desired to take it up, and putting him, instead, upon work smuggling work, there was no purpose to shield the powerful trust that has defrauded the government to an extent estimated as high as $30,000,000.

Incidentally Mr. Shaw told an interesting story of years of experiment which have been conducted at the Philadelphia mint to perfect an automatic scale which will preclude the possibility of underweighing in the future. This scale, he said, is now perfected and will save the government a million dollars annually. Mr. Shaw spoke of the difficulties in the way of obtaining convictions against offenders. "It is seldom," he said, "that a government employee is crooked, but they live in an atmosphere that is unfriendly to the strict enforcement of the law. They meet no one but importers' agents and custom brokers. If they are invited to dinner or to the theater it is by the representative of an importer. Then, in addition, the administrative machinery is so complicated that when fraud is discovered it is difficult to get prompt action, and then, too, the fraudulent importers are pretty well organized. The large importers, as a rule, are honest, and we relied on them."

Starving and Terrorized Man a Maniac When Discovered.
Pittsburg, Nov. 15.—Lost in the abandoned workings of the new Walton mine, near West Elizabeth, for nearly a week, without food, light or water, Charles Rodgers, about forty years old, was found by miners. He was a raving maniac from privation and fear. Searching parties who have explored the mine almost daily since he disappeared, long failed to find the missing man, and it was not until in his delirium he cried out, while a number of miners were delivering posts in the abandoned section, that he was found.

The place where Rodgers was found was passed over at least twenty times by a searching party, and had one of them put out his hand he could not have failed to touch the missing man. Army Officer Buys Aeroplane.
Mobile, Ala., Nov. 15.—Lieutenant M. N. Rhoades, quartermaster at Fort Barrancas, is constructing an aeroplane there, and within six weeks he will make the first test. The aeroplane is somewhat on the order of the Wright machine, but differing in that he has a number of distinctive features which are not possessed by any of the present flying machines. It is built to soar.

A motion was made for a new trial, and she was admitted to bail. Witnesses for the prosecution testified that Mrs. Boyers had quarreled with Miss Mary S. Delmar, Del., Nov. 15.—Bayard, the little four-year-old son of Mrs. Loris Brown, is dying from drinking a large portion of lye. The boy asked his mother for a drink of water. All medical power has failed to relieve the boy.

Twenty-five Lives Imperiled.
Duluth, Minn., Nov. 15.—The steamer Hoyt is still on the rocks near Bayfield, Wis. Rescue parties are unable to reach the ship, although several attempts have been made. The tug Helm, of Ashland, is making another attempt at rescue. The fate of the crew of twenty-five is unknown.

Car Shortage Serious.
Pittsburg, Nov. 15.—Coke operators of the Klondike and Connelville regions are at present face to face with one of the most serious handicaps in years, occasioned by a car shortage that becomes worse from day to day instead of showing improvement. The situation is extremely serious.

San Barov of Wyoming told of one of the first humorous paragraphs of his former editorial associate, Bill Nye. There had been a railroad accident. The locomotive was lost, two passenger cars were destroyed, the express car was smashed, but no one had been fatally hurt. This is the way Bill Nye described it: "For upward of twenty years repairs have been repeatedly promised the old South bridge. Hoping against hope and waiting until distracted the old bridge became discouraged at last and yesterday just laid down in the gorge with a passenger train."

AN ODD COURTSHIP.
By M. QUAD.
[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]
The wife of Deacon Hiram Platt had been dead three years when it came to his ears that people were wondering why he didn't place a tombstone at her grave. At her death the sorrowing husband had fully intended to give her a monument thirty feet high; three months later he had reduced the height to fifteen feet; then he had gone down foot by foot until he figured that a common gravestone would be all that was expected. One may have his own ideas about such matters, but when people begin to talk he must consult the ideas of others to a certain extent. Therefore Deacon Platt hustled around to put up a stone. About the time the deacon lost his wife Mrs. Samantha Taylor, living in the same village, lost her husband. She also had a thirty foot monument in her mind, and she also sealed it down to a plain, cheap stone. Further, there came a time when gossip criticized her for the unmarked grave, and she set about doing something. She had removed to another village, but gossip follows one everywhere. It thus came about one summer day, when the deacon drove out to the country graveyard to fix up things, he found the widow there for the same object. The graves of their dead were not fifty feet apart. The deacon had a look of sorrow on his face and the widow had tears in her eyes as they shook hands.

"It was a noble man," said the deacon, referring, of course, to the lamented Taylor.
"And she was all that a wife should be," replied the widow, referring, of course, to the lamented Mrs. Platt.
"I am glad to know that you mourn him."
"And I am glad to know that you mourn her."
"Her time had come, and she had to go."
"And the same with him."
The weeds had to be cleared away and the mounds rounded up and sodded and the stones set. They worked together at this. They sorrowed for about half an hour, and then it was something else. When their backs ached and they were ready to quit work for the day the deacon helped her into her buggy with the remark:
"I have seemed to feel Mrs. Platt looking down on me this afternoon."
"And I have felt the presence of my dear lost husband," she replied.

Then they both looked very solemn, and she drove away to return on the morrow and find the deacon there before her. He repeated that her lamented was a noble man, and she repeated that his lamented was all that a wife should be. They cut down and hauled away weeds and briars and brought dirt and soda, and when they rested they sat close together on an old bench. It was during one of these resting spells that the deacon sighed three times in succession and said:
"Widder Taylor, when night had come and you were sitting alone in your loneliness did you ever think it possible that you could find another man as good as George was?"
"Why, while he was a noble man, there must be other noble men in the world," she replied.
"Yes, widder, and other noble women, though I never had no fault to find with Hanner, I am sure we loved 'em."
"Yes, we did."
"And it grieved us to see them go."
"It did."
"But they are better off in that brighter land."
Then they parted and went home, and it was noticeable that neither looked as solemn as before. They were not smiling, but the solemn looks had somehow chased themselves away. The next day was to see the end of their work, and they both got there early. The deacon seemed to press the widow's hand when he helped her out of the buggy, and she seemed a bit confused over it, but this may have been all imagination. By mid-afternoon the stones were in place, and as they retreated a few paces to survey them the deacon solemnly said:
"Widder, if your lost husband can look down on earth he is seeing that sun and saying to himself that it's good enough for anybody."
"Yes," she sighed, "and your Hanner must say the same thing. We could have got monuments, of course, but—"
"But monuments attract lightning," finished the deacon.
"And are blown over in high winds," and she drove over to her home.
"Yes, I think our lost ones ought to feel quite chirpy. We have the best two lots here."

"And they are picturesquely situated, deacon."
Then the deacon led her out to the gate and her buggy. They walked at a slow pace, and neither seemed to notice that he was holding her hand. When she had been seated in the vehicle the deacon rested a foot on the hub of a front wheel and sighed and said:
"I'm lonesome for us, widder."
"Yes, pretty lonesome, deacon."
"I think I'll drive over to see you tomorrow afternoon."
"I'll be expecting you."
"And we'll talk."
"Yes."
"And we'll talk—and talk."
"We will."
And three months later, when they were married, the gossips were meant about it. They said that the couple had done their courting in a graveyard, but we know better. It was done just outside the gate.

LITTLE HOPE FOR BURIED MINERS

384 Men Trapped by Fire Are Probably Dead.

RESCUERS ARE AT WORK

Experts in Oxygen Helmets With Oxygen Tanks Fought Their Way Down Shaft, But Did Not Reach Any of the Miners—Company May Be Blamed For Disaster.

Cherry, Ill., Nov. 15.—Three hundred and eighty-four men are probably dead in the mine of the St. Paul Coal company here, where they were trapped by fire Saturday afternoon. All efforts to rescue them have so far failed. Not a sign of life has been recovered from the imprisoned men.

Fire which gutted the two shafts has been smothered, but it is feared that the men's lives have been snuffed out by that effort to save them from being roasted alive.

Miner experts in oxygen helmets have made five trips down in the air shaft. They reached the second vein level, but not one of the miners has been reached.

The helmeted men, with electric lanterns, and with oxygen tanks strapped on their backs, fought their way down the shaft. Dense smoke still poured from the shaft when they entered. Projecting timbers had to be passed, and a caving-in was feared by the most hopeful. Until the mine divers enter the second vein level and close the trapdoors and the mine can be cleared of smoke, the deadly fire-damp and blackdamp, the experts say they can only wait.

Hope for some of the entombed men has not been abandoned. The more experienced, the old timers, it is hoped, have made for the "face," the ends of the galleries and winding rooms, rooms, where the very coal walls may shut out the heavy smoke and give them one fighting chance in a thousand.

Blame for the disaster may be placed upon the company and its executives because of inactivity in the hour that the shaft was left at the bottom of the lower level. Evidence along that line was given before the coroner's jury at the inquest over the body of John Flood, one of the rescuers. John Ralsbeck, engineer of the shaft, admitted that he raised his cage but once in the rescue work. Strict obedience to the rules requiring signals for every motion of the cage was offered as his excuse.

His evidence and that of John Cowley, engineer of the main shaft, caused the jury to decide upon a thorough probe of the matter of signals. Impatience at the two witnesses was shown by the jurors at their absolutely literal interpretation of their instructions on the signal code.

So early did the jury consider the inactivity of the two engineers in the shaft that it was decided to hear only testimony of the routine facts concerning the twelve dead officially brought to their notice.

The catastrophe, one of the worst in the history of the coal industry in America, came with the suddenness and fury of a hurricane blast, and its fearful work was as quickly done. Shortly after the explosion occurred, twelve bodies were taken out. Six of these were horses not employed in the mine, who gave their lives in a futile effort to save the imprisoned mine workers.

When these devoted men had given up their lives it was realized that there was no more hope of rescue, and though there waited many who were ready to make the hopeless attempt to save their imprisoned comrades, they were restrained and, four hours after the explosion occurred, the entrance of the mine was sealed in the hope of checking the flames.

Will Pardon Slayers of Night Riders. Lexington, Ky., Nov. 15.—Governor Willson is determined to break up the night rider troubles in Kentucky. If heroic steps on his part will accomplish the feat, and to that end he has notified all farmers fearing an attack to call on him for military aid until the farmers themselves can make preparations to resist the attack, and in addition he has pleaded with the farmers to kill any person who attempts to injure their property, offering as a reward a pardon for the murderer.

Three Dead in Pittsburg Fire. Pittsburg, Nov. 15.—Three dead and a score injured, seven of them perhaps fatally, was the result of a fire at 425 Water street. The three-story restaurant and boarding house of Frank Miller was burned to the ground, and from the ruins there were brought three charred corpses, the identity of which are not known, as the trio came to Miller's place and went to bed in one room, being smothered and cremated there later.

Margaret Hillington Weds. Reno, Nev., Nov. 15.—Miss Margaret Hillington, a former actress, who was divorced on Wednesday last, Daniel Frohman, a New York theatrical manager, was married to Edward J. Rowes, a millionaire real estate dealer of Tacoma. The wedding was held quietly in Reno.

THE WILD RICE LEGEND. Longfellow's "Hawthorne" relates an interesting legend of the origin of the corn plant. A legend of similar charm has been handed down telling of the origin of the wild rice which is related not only by myriads of wild fowl, but is a staple article of food with many northern Indians. The story is that long years ago the Indian tribes lived in the sunny south, but in course of time they increased, covering all lands, except the north. In order to prevent the extinction of game many tribes became cannibals. One tribe, whose chief was Babomya-

MME. STEINHELL ACQUITTED

Woman Accused of Killing Her Husband and Stepmother Freed. Paris, Nov. 15.—General approval is given the acquittal of Mme. Marguerite Steinhell on a charge of having murdered her husband and her stepmother by the populace of Paris. In every case the verdict is the sole topic of conversation, while hushed voices discuss the revelations that might have been made at the trial, and the deeper mystery attached to the case by the acquittal of the woman.

"What will be the next step of the government in the investigation of the case, and what will be the result?" is the question on every one's lips. Driven to try Mme. Steinhell by the cry of the populace, and promising a clear solution of the death of the two, and with a probable solution of the death of former President Felix Faure, the government has failed to fulfill its promises. A renewed investigation may be made, following the pledge made during the trial that the government would continue its search until some one is punished and the crime cleared.

The verdict was handed down after the jury had been out two and a half hours. Thrice the jury had called on the president of the court for instructions, which assured bad for the prisoner, but the verdict showed an acquittal on every count of the indictment.

FOOTBALL INJURIES FATAL TO TWO

Concussion of Brain and Ruptured Blood Vessel Cause Death.

Washington, Nov. 15.—Archer Christian, eighteen years old, left halfback of the University of Virginia football team, died following an operation for concussion of the brain. Christian was injured in the game with the Georgetown university on Saturday and was taken to Georgetown University hospital, where the operation was performed.

Christian was injured in a cross buck over the Georgetown tackle. He succeeded in the cross buck, but when the players were disentangled Christian did not rise. Physicians were unable to bring him to.

Diagnosis at the hospital showed concussion of the brain and the physicians operated almost immediately in hope of saving the life of the player, but their efforts were unavailing.

Young Football Player Dies. Grand Rapids, O., Nov. 15.—Roy Vogel, a schoolboy, injured two weeks ago in a football game, died. A blood vessel in his head was ruptured and he was unconscious for thirteen days.

Another Added to List. Doylestown, Pa., Nov. 15.—Frank McBride, left end of the Wisablickon football team of Ambler, was so seriously injured in the game here that he is still unconscious, and it is not known how serious his internal injuries or those to his head may be.

Ohio Quarterback Injured. Cleveland, O., Nov. 15.—Raymond Austin, quarterback of the Ohio Wesleyan university football team, is in a local hospital suffering from concussion of the brain as the result of injuries received in the game played between his team and the Case School of Applied Science.

Player May Lose His Leg. Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 15.—Leonard Entler, aged thirteen years, was taken to the Harrisburg hospital with a badly infected kneecap, which may result in a dead bone and cause the boy the loss of his leg or his life. Entler was hurt in a football scrimmage ten days ago, but nothing serious appeared to be wrong until four days after the accident.

BOY'S BODY IN CHIMNEY

Five-Year-Old Lad Disappeared Ten Days Ago.

New York, Nov. 15.—The dead body of a five-year-old Italian boy, who dropped out of sight about ten days ago, was found in a chimney at 322 West Sixty-third street. The young star, Frank de Rossa, came down from his father's home in the Bronx with his mother on Nov. 4. He played around the hallways of the four-story tenement in which his aunt lives on West Sixty-third street, and when his mother started to look for him he was not to be found.

Hears Father Is Dead; Preaches On. Huntington, Pa., Nov. 15.—Just before beginning his sermon in the First Reformed church here, the pastor, Rev. D. B. Master, received a telegram announcing the death of his father, in Clarion county. Notwithstanding the shock he preached his sermon and, then broke down and wept. In his sermon he declared that women should be given the right to vote, even if the majority were opposed to it.

May Lose Hand Through Cat's Bite. Millville, N. J., Nov. 15.—Jerome, a glassworker, was bitten on the hand by a cat five days ago, and the member is now greatly swollen. Physicians fear that amputation of the hand will be necessary.

His tribe should always live in peace and harmony with the white race. The directions were carried out; the seed planted; and wild rice grew, furnishing a nourishing food for the Indian and proving a great attraction for wild fowl.

The existence of this legend is cited to the present day to explain why the Chippeway Indians have never been at war with the whites. Wild rice still forms a staple article of diet with many northern Indians, while the extensive fields of it are the gathering place for wild fowl, some of them flying hundreds of miles to reach them.

MONSTER STRIKE NEXT SPRING

Soft Coal Operators Prepare to Force an Issue.

250,000 MEN INVOLVED

Mine Owners Demand That Miners Accept a Reduction of Wages—Workmen Will Oppose Cut, Claiming It Means Abject Poverty.

Pittsburg, Nov. 15.—Although the working agreement between the bituminous coal operators and the United Mine Workers of America does not expire until next April, the operators are already making preparations to force an issue upon the miners that may result in another great national conflict, in which the miners assert 250,000 miners will join.

The Association of Bituminous Coal Operators in Central Pennsylvania has held several quiet meetings and discussed matters that are creating considerable uneasiness in the miners' camp.

It has leaked out that many independent operators have attended these sessions, and every effort is being made to strengthen the association to inaugurate a combined movement to reduce wages next spring.

The operators claim that there is an insufficient margin of profit for them at the present market price of coal, for which they are compelled to pay 66 cents a ton for mining, and they demand that the miners accept a "reasonable" reduction, without having agreed among themselves upon the proposed cut.

On their part the miners are resolutely setting their faces against any reduction in wages. They claim that, owing to the slackness of work and present low wages they are barely able to make a living for themselves and families, and that they will go to the finish before they permit themselves to be pressed over the border line and into starvation and abject poverty.

OFFICIALS FOIL LYNCHERS

Mob Wanted to Execute Man Whom Little Girl Accused.

Staunton, Va., Nov. 15.—A mob surged about the city in an attempt to get hold of Clifford Beckenridge, a negro, who is said to have confessed repeated attempts of criminal assault on the seven-year-old granddaughter of George A. Hutcheson, keeper of the county prison, but the sheriff and the chief of police protected the negro from the rioters.

The mob's leaders, believing that an attempt would be made to take Beckenridge from the city by train, had the fire bells rung to swell the crowd, and watched the jail and the railway station, but the sheriff and chief of police kept the negro under cover and prevented his being lynched by the angry people. The city has quieted down, but feeling is still strong. The authorities are carefully guarding Beckenridge.

NEXT HOUSE DEMOCRATIC

People Weary of Aldrich Tariff and Cannon, Says Clark.

Chicago, Nov. 15.—Congressman Champ Clark, of Missouri, in a speech at the Northwestern Railroad shops in this city, declared that he had no doubt that the next congress would be Democratic. He sharply criticised the Aldrich tariff and commented on the Cannon politics, saying that "as a political issue, 'Uncle Joe' Cannon is the best we Democrats have, next to the Aldrich tariff."

Clark's speech was made in the interest of F. S. Ryan, Democratic candidate for congress in the district formerly represented in congress by Senator Lorimer.

Safe Blowers Got $4000. New York, Nov. 15.—A safe was blown open and $4000 in cash, besides a gold watch and several checks and postoffice money orders, were taken, in the very heart of the tenderloin. The police knew nothing of it until L. L. Lanier, assistant manager of the Regal shoe store, at 1369 Broadway, entered the store and found the safe open.

Thirty Dead in Jamaica Storm. Kingston, Jamaica (delayed in transmission), Nov. 15.—The great storm abated Friday. Reports of the damage done by the floods and the wind place the loss at about $7,000,000. The banana trade is hard hit, many of the plantations being practically ruined. Fully thirty deaths have been reported so far.

John G. Carlisle Easier. New York, Nov. 15.—John G. Carlisle, who was secretary of the treasury under President Cleveland, was reported as resting more comfortably at St. Vincent's hospital, where he lies seriously ill with acute intestinal troubles.

Old Man Shot Dead; Hunters Blamed. Washington, Nov. 15.—Joseph C. Squires, sixty-seven years old, and for many years a clerk in the pension bureau in this city, was found shot dead near his home here. It is believed that hunters fired the shot.

ESTIMATING THE WHEAT. Probabilities of the Outcome of a Very Interesting Season. The wheat season starts with smaller reserves than in the famous year 1897, when low supplies of old wheat, followed by a 30 per cent shortage in the European crop and a 100,000,000 bushel increase in our own, had some remarkable financial results. This means a sure and quick market for the new crop. It is impossible as yet to estimate the probable foreign wheat harvest of 1900; latest advices indicate that, while the crop in France, England and Russia will be sufficient, Germany and the Danube states have fared badly, so that the total European crop will hardly match the abundant yield of 1900 and 1901. The obvious meaning of such a situation is that Europe must have such of our wheat surplus as the American market can spare and must pay fair prices for it. Had the winter wheat estimate of Aug. 14 confirmed the 400,000,000 bushel prediction current a few weeks before, instead of raising the calculation to 432,000,000, and had the spring wheat promise been in any way seriously impaired, the country would scarcely have escaped a later repetition of the Chicago speculation of last May and our export trade would have been greatly restricted. But 32,000,000 extra bushels make a considerable difference.

It still remains to see what happens to our spring wheat crop and to foreign crops in the two remaining months. But as matters stand, however, there are several reasonable inferences:

ESTIMATING THE WHEAT.

First, the American farmer will sell an abundant wheat crop at highly remunerative prices; second, those prices are not likely to go again to the "famine figure," which will impose hardship on consumers; third, the railways will have the average amount of wheat to transport to market; fourth, our export of wheat and flour, which in the past twelve months was cut down 50,000,000 bushels from the year before and 31,000,000 from two years ago, should be increased by twenty-five to forty millions, thereby helping our market for international exchange and at the same time easing the strain on Europe's wheat trade.

WORTH REMEMBERING.

Saddle grafting is used for small plants, the stock being cut to a wedge and the scion cut and set upon the wedge. In splice grafting of the simplest form the two parts are cut across diagonally and laid together, being tied together with a string and waxed. It is useful for soft or tender wood which will not admit of splitting.

By separating the rooters from the hens after the breeding season their vitality as breeders will be strengthened. If kerosene is rubbed lightly on their feathers they will not fight and will soon become acquainted with each other.

A horse that will walk steadily five miles an hour will cover the same ground in a day with much less fatigue than one that trots half the time. We do not sufficiently appreciate the value and capability of good, fast walkers.

Land burned over almost always comes up with an inferior growth, such as gray birch, wild cherry and soft maple. Such land offers the most hopeful chances for cheap improvement through seeding or planting pines and cutting the other trees in a few years.

An odor will be observed in the milk if silage is fed to cows a short time before milking, but if given shortly after milking the silage smell cannot be detected.

It will mean a loss to the farmer to have the cow afraid of him. It is a loss every time she is frightened. To run a cow to pasture is like throwing money away. A cow in any way worried will not do her best. The cow that is made a pet of will make money for its owner. The milk of a frightened or abused cow is poisonous.

Pay an occasional friendly visit to the little trees set this spring. Rub off unnecessary sprouts and make sure that no label wires have been left on the trees to choke them.

Nearly every farmer has more or less tilthage land that is too sour for best crop production. He would try the effect of lime on an acre or two if he knew that the specially prepared form of lime can be spread easily on land without any disagreeable effects on the user or any troublesome preparation of the material.

A good horse and wagon, neat clothes, clean packages and polite manners naturally go with a choice retail trade in farm products.

Millions of Onions. Fourteen million bushels of onions were raised in the United States last year, and so great was the demand that 1,400,000 bushels more were imported from Spain, Egypt, Bermuda and the south sea islands. The value of America's crop was $10,000,000, and the department of agriculture believes that of 1900 should be worth twice as much. It has just issued a bulletin on the subject as a gentle reminder to the average farmer and truck grower that they are overlooking the onion—as if any one could do such a thing. For many centuries this vegetable thrived only in the valleys and lowlands, but improved agricultural methods have made it possible to raise it with profit on the hilltops. The Bermuda variety is being grown with tremendous success in all of the south ern states, especially along the gulf coast. Each succeeding year brings new ideas as to marketing, and the danger of having the fruit rot in transit is fast becoming a thing of the past.

The onion thrives in ponds or flowing streams, varying in depth from a few inches to four feet. The seed is often sown in game preserves and private ponds and seems to do well under a variety of soil conditions, though it seems to flourish best where the bottom is a soft black mud. The seed may be sown in spring or fall, preferably the latter, and may be secured of several northern firms. Where wild rice grows the ducks will come to feed, and the hunting in many a locality where there are suitable ponds or streams could be greatly improved were some wild rice sown.

LITTLE HOPE FOR BURIED MINERS

384 Men Trapped by Fire Are Probably Dead.

RESCUERS ARE AT WORK

Experts in Oxygen Helmets With Oxygen Tanks Fought Their Way Down Shaft, But Did Not Reach Any of the Miners—Company May Be Blamed For Disaster.

Cherry, Ill., Nov. 15.—Three hundred and eighty-four men are probably dead in the mine of the St. Paul Coal company here, where they were trapped by fire Saturday afternoon. All efforts to rescue them have so far failed. Not a sign of life has been received from the imprisoned men.

Fire which gutted the two shafts has been smothered, but it is feared that the men's lives have been snuffed out by that effort to save them from being roasted alive.

Miners experts in oxygen helmets have made five trips down in the air shaft. They reached the second vein level, but not one of the miners has been reached.

The helmeted men, with electric lanterns, and with oxygen tanks strapped on their backs, fought their way down the shaft. Dense smoke still poured from the shaft when they entered. Projecting timbers had to be passed, and a cave-in was feared by the most hopeful. Until the mine divers enter the second vein level and close trapdoors and the mine can be cleared of smoke, the deadly fireclay and blackdamp, the experts say they can only wait.

Hope for some of the entombed men has not been abandoned. The more experienced, the old timers, it is hoped, have made for the "face," the ends of the galleries and winding rooms, rooms, where the very coal walls may shut out the heavy smoke and give them one fighting chance in a thousand.

Blame for the disaster may be placed upon the company and its executives because of inactivity in the hour that the air shaft cage was left at the bottom of the lower level. Evidence along that line was given before the coroner's jury at the inquest over the body of John Flood, one of the rescuers. John Ralsbeck, engineer of the air shaft, admitted that he raised his cage but once in the rescue work. Strict obedience to the rules requiring signals for every motion of the cage was offered as his excuse.

His evidence and that of John Cowley, engineer of the main shaft, caused the jury to decide upon a thorough probe of the matter of signals. Impatience at the two witnesses was shown by the jurors at their absolutely literal interpretation of their instructions on the signal code.

So seriously did the jury consider the inactivity of the two engineers in the crisis that it was decided to hear only testimony of the routine facts concerning the twelve dead officially brought to their notice.

The catastrophe, one of the worst in the history of the coal industry in America, came with the suddenness and fury of a hurricane blast, and its fearful work was as quickly done.

Shortly after the explosion occurred twelve bodies were taken out. Six of these were heroes not employed in the mine, who gave their lives in a futile effort to save the imprisoned mine workers.

When these devoted men had given up their lives it was realized that there was no more hope of rescue, and though there waited many who were ready to make the hopeless attempt to save their imprisoned comrades, they were restrained and, four hours after the explosion occurred, the entrance of the mine was sealed in the hope of checking the flames.

Three Dead in Pittsburg Fire.

Pittsburg, Nov. 15.—Three dead and a score injured, seven of them perhaps fatally, was the result of a fire at 425 Water street. The three-story restaurant and boarding house of Frank Miller was burned to the ground, and from the ruins there were brought three charred corpses, the identity of which are not known, as the trio came to Miller's place and went to bed in one room, being smothered and cremated there later.

Margaret Illington Weds.

Reno, Nev., Nov. 15.—Miss Margaret Illington, a former actress, who was divorced on Wednesday from Daniel Frohman, a New York theatrical manager, was married to Edward J. Bowen, a millionaire real estate dealer of Tacoma. The wedding was held quietly in Reno.

THE WILD RICE LEGEND.

Longfellow's "Hiawatha" relates an interesting legend of the origin of the corn plant. A legend of similar charm has been handed down telling of the origin of the wild rice which is re-lished not only by myriads of wild fowl, but is a staple article of food with many northern Indians. The story is that long years ago the Indian tribes lived in the sunny south, but in course of time they increased, covering all lands, except the north. In order to prevent the extinction of game many tribes became cannibals. One tribe, whose chief was Babonwa-

MME. STEINHIL ACQUITTED

Woman Accused of Killing Her Husband and Stepmother Freed.
Paris, Nov. 15.—General approval is given the acquittal of Mme. Marguerite Steinhil on a charge of having murdered her husband and her stepmother by the populace of Paris. In every cafe the verdict is the sole topic of conversation, while hushed voices discuss the revelations that might have been made at the trial, and the deeper mystery attached to the case by the acquittal of the woman.

"What will be the next step of the government in the investigation of the case, and what will be the result?" is the question on every one's lips. Driven to try Mme. Steinhil by the cry of the populace, and promising a clear solution of the death of the two, and with a probable solution of the death of former President Felix Faure, the government has failed to fulfill its promises. A renewed investigation may be made, following the pledge made during the trial that the government would continue its search until some one is punished and the crime cleared.

The verdict was handed down after the jury had been out two and a half hours. Thrice the jury had called on the president of the court for instructions, which augured bad for the prisoner, but the verdict showed an acquittal on every count of the indictment.

FOOTBALL INJURIES FATAL TO TWO

Concussion of Brain and Ruptured Blood Vessel Cause Death.

Washington, Nov. 15.—Archer Christian, eighteen years old, left halfback of the University of Virginia football team, died following an operation for concussion of the brain. Christian was injured in the game with the Georgetown university on Saturday and was taken to Georgetown University hospital, where the operation was performed.

Christian was injured in a cross buck over the Georgetown tackle. He succeeded in the cross buck, but when the players were disentangled Christian did not rise. Physicians were unable to bring him to.

Diagnosis at the hospital showed concussion of the brain and the physicians operated almost immediately in hope of saving the life of the player, but their efforts were unavailing.

Young Football Player Dies.

Grand Rapids, O., Nov. 15.—Roy Vogel, a schoolboy, injured two weeks ago in a football game, died. A blood vessel in his head was ruptured and he was unconscious for thirteen days.

Another Added to List.

Dryden, Pa., Nov. 15.—Frank Doyle, left end of the Wisabickon football team of Ambler, was so seriously injured in the game here that he is still unconscious, and it is not known how serious his internal injuries or those to his head may be.

Ohio Quarterback Injured.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 15.—Raymond Austin, quarterback of the Ohio Wesleyan university football team, is in a local hospital suffering from concussion of the brain as the result of injuries received in the game played between his team and the Case School of Applied Science.

Player May Lose His Leg.

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 15.—Leonard Entler, aged thirteen years, was taken to the Harrisburg hospital with a badly infected kneecap, which may result in a dead bone and cause the boy the loss of his leg or his life. Entler was hurt in a football scrimmage ten days ago, but nothing serious appeared to be wrong until four days after the accident.

Five-Year-Old Lad Disappeared Ten Days Ago.

New York, Nov. 15.—The dead body of a five-year-old Italian boy, who dropped out of eight about ten days ago, was found in a chimney at 322 East Sixty-third street. The youngster, Frank de Rosa, came down from his father's home in the Bronx with his mother on Nov. 4. He played around the hallways of the four-story tenement in which his aunt lives on West Sixty-third street, and when his mother started to look for him he was not to be found.

Hears Father Is Dead; Preaches On.

Huntingdon, Pa., Nov. 15.—Just before beginning his sermon in the First Reformed church here, the pastor, Rev. D. E. Master, received a telegram announcing the death of his father, in Clarion county. Notwithstanding the shock he preached his sermon and then broke down and wept. In his sermon he declared that women should be given the right to vote, even if the majority were opposed to it.

May Lose Hand Through Cat's Bite.

Millville, N. J., Nov. 15.—Jere Porch, a glassworker, was bitten on the hand by a cat five days ago, and the member is now greatly swollen. Physicians fear that amputation of the hand will be necessary.

gliskung, thought this was wrong. Wandering one day far from his haunt in search of game, he became exhausted from fatigue and hunger and lay down to sleep. In a vision he saw a beautiful white spirit, which told him to gather his tribe together and take them to the northland, where they would have peace and plenty. On his journey he would come to a great lake, on the shore of which he would find a birch bark basket containing seed which he was to sow upon the waters, and this would grow and produce a food that would prove everlasting. The only condition exacted was that

Soft Coal Operators Prepare to Force an Issue.

250,000 MEN INVOLVED

Mine Owners Demand That Miners Accept a Reduction of Wages—Workmen Will Oppose Cut, Claiming It Means Abject Poverty.

Pittsburg, Nov. 15.—Although the working agreement between the bituminous coal operators and the United Mine Workers of America does not expire until next April, the operators are already making preparations to force an issue upon the miners that may result in another great national conflict, in which the miners assert 250,000 miners will join.

The Association of Bituminous Coal Operators in Central Pennsylvania has held several quiet meetings and discussed matters that are creating considerable uneasiness in the miners' camp.

It has leaked out that many independent operators have attended these sessions, and every effort is being made to strengthen the association to inaugurate a combined movement to reduce wages next spring.

The operators claim that there is an insufficient margin of profit for them at the present market price of coal, for which they are compelled to pay 64 cents a ton for mining, and they demand that the miners accept a "reasonable" reduction, without having agreed among themselves upon the proposed cut.

On their part the miners are resolutely setting their faces against any reduction in wages. They claim that, owing to the slackness of work and present low wages they are barely able to make a living for themselves and families, and that they will go to the finish before they permit themselves to be pressed over the border line and into starvation and abject poverty.

OFFICIALS FOIL LYNCHERS

Mob Wanted to Execute Man Whom Little Girl Accused.

Staunton, Va., Nov. 15.—A mob armed about the city in an attempt to get hold of Clifford Beckwith, a negro, who is said to have confessed repeated attempts of criminal assault on the seven-year-old granddaughter of George A. Hutcheson, keeper of the county prison, but the sheriff and the chief of police protected the negro from the rioters.

The mob's leaders, believing that an attempt would be made to take Beckwith from the city by train, had the fire bells rung to swell the crowd, and watched the jail and the railway station, but the sheriff and chief of police kept the negro under cover and prevented his being lynched by the angry people. The city has quieted down, but feeling is still strong. The authorities are carefully guarding Beckwith.

People Weary of Aldrich Tariff and Cannon, Says Clark.

Chicago, Nov. 15.—Congressman Champ Clark, of Missouri, in a speech at the Northwestern Railroad shops in this city, declared that he had no doubt that the next congress would be Democratic. He sharply criticized the Aldrich tariff and commented on the Cannon politics, saying that "as a political issue, Uncle Joe Cannon is the best we Democrats have, next to the Aldrich tariff."

Clark's speech was made in the interest of F. S. Ryan, Democratic candidate for congress in the district formerly represented in congress by Senator Lorimer.

Safe Blowers Got $4000.

New York, Nov. 15.—A safe was blown open and $4000 in cash, besides a gold watch and several checks and postage money orders were taken in the very heart of the tenderloin. The police knew nothing of it until L. L. Lanier, assistant manager of the Regal shoe store, at 1369 Broadway, entered the store and found the safe open.

Thirty Dead in Jamaica Storm.

Kingston, Jamaica (delayed in transmission), Nov. 15.—The great storm abated Friday. Reports of the damage done by the floods and the wind place the loss at about $7,000,000. The banana trade is hard hit, many of the plantations being practically ruined. Fully thirty deaths have been reported so far.

John G. Carlisle Enslers.

New York, Nov. 15.—John G. Carlisle, who was secretary of the treasury under President Cleveland, was reported as resting more comfortably at St. Vincent's hospital, where he lies seriously ill with acute intestinal troubles.

Old Man Shot Dead; Hunters Blamed.

Washington, Nov. 15.—Joseph C. Squires, sixty-seven years old, and for many years a clerk in the pension bureau in this city, was found shot dead near his home here. It is believed that hunters fired the shot.

His tribe should always live in peace and harmony with the white race. The directions were carried out, the seed planted, and wild rice grew, furnishing a nourishing food for the Indian and proving a great attraction for wild fowl.

The existence of this legend is cited to the present day to explain why the Chippeway Indians have never been at war with the whites. Wild rice still forms a staple article of diet with many northern Indians, while the extensive fields of it are the gathering place for wild fowl, some of them flying hundreds of miles to reach them

ESTIMATING THE WHEAT.

Probabilities of the Outcome of a Very Interesting Season.

The wheat season starts with small reserves even than in the famous year 1887, when low supplies of old wheat, followed by a 50 per cent shortage in the European crop and a 100,000,000 bushel increase in our own, had some remarkable financial results. This means a sure and quick market for the new crop. It is impossible as yet to estimate the probable foreign wheat harvest of 1920; latest advices indicate that, while the crop in France, England and Russia will be sufficient, Germany and the Danubian states have fared badly, so that the total European crop will hardly match the abundant yield of 1908 and 1909. The obvious meaning of such a situation is that Europe must have such of our wheat surplus as the American market can spare and must pay fair prices for it. Had the winter wheat estimate of Aug. 14 confirmed the 400,000,000 bushel prediction current a few weeks before, instead of raising the calculation to 432,000,000, and had the spring wheat promise been in any way seriously impaired the country would scarcely have escaped a later repetition of the Chicago speculation of last May and our export trade would have been greatly restricted. But 52,000,000 extra bushels make a considerable difference.

It still remains to see what happens to our spring wheat crop and to foreign crops in the two remaining months. But as matters stand, however, there are several reasonable inferences:

First, the American farmer will sell an abundant wheat crop at highly remunerative prices; second, those prices are not likely to go again to the "famine figure," which will impose hardship on consumers; third, the railways will have the average amount of wheat to transport to market; fourth, our export of wheat and flour, which in the past twelve months was cut down 50,000,000 bushels from the year before and 31,000,000 from two years ago, should be increased by twenty-five to forty millions, thereby helping our market for international exchange and at the same time easing the strain on Europe's wheat trade.

WORTH REMEMBERING.

Saddle grafting is used for small plants, the stock being cut to a wedge and the scion cut and set upon the wedge. In splice grafting of the simplest form the two parts are cut across diagonally and laid together, being tied together with a string and waxed. It is useful for soft or tender wood which will not admit of splitting.

By separating the roosters from the hens after the breeding season their vitality as breeders will be strengthened. If kerosene is rubbed lightly on their feathers they will not fight and will soon become acquainted with each other.

A horse that will walk steadily five miles an hour will cover the same ground in a day with much less fatigue than one that trots half the time. We do not sufficiently appreciate the value and capability of good, fast walkers.

Land burned over almost always comes up with an inferior growth such as gray birch, wild cherry and soft maple. Such land offers the most hopeful chances for cheap improvement through seeding or planting pieces and cutting the other trees in a few years.

An odor will be observed in the milk if silage is fed to cows a short time before milking, but if given shortly after milking the silage smell cannot be detected.

It will mean a loss to the farmer to have the cow afraid of him. It is a loss every time she is frightened. To run a cow to pasture is like throwing money away. A cow in any way worried will not do her best. The cow that is made a pet of will make money for its owner. The milk of a frightened or abused cow is poisonous.

Pay an occasional friendly visit to the little trees set this spring. Rub off unnecessary sprouts and make sure that no label wires have been left on the trees to choke them.

Nearly every farmer has more or less tillage land that is too sour for best crop production. He would try the effect of lime on an acre or two if he knew that the specially prepared form of lime can be spread easily on land without any disagreeable effects on the user or any troublesome preparation of the material.

A good horse and wagon, neat clothes, clean packages and polite manners naturally go with a choice retail trade in farm products.

Millions of Onions.

Fourteen million bushels of onions were raised in the United States last year, and so great was the demand that 1,400,000 bushels more were imported from Spain, Egypt, Bermuda and the south sea islands. The value of America's crop was $10,000,000, and the department of agriculture believes that of 1920 should be worth twice as much. It has just issued a bulletin to the subject as a gentle reminder to the average farmer and truck grower that they are overlooking the onion—as if any one could do such a thing. For many centuries this vegetable thrived only in the valleys and lowlands, but improved agricultural methods have made it possible to raise it with profit on the hilltops. The Bermuda variety is being grown with tremendous success in all of the southern states, especially along the gulf coast. Each succeeding year brings new ideas as to marketing, and the danger of having the fruit rot in transit is fast becoming a thing of the past.

Some plant thrives in ponds or flowing streams, varying in depth from a few inches to four feet. The seed is often sown in game preserves and private ponds and seems to do well under a variety of soil conditions, though it seems to flourish best where the bottom is a soft black mud. The seed may be sown in spring or fall, preferably the latter, and may be secured of several northern firms. Where wild rice grows the ducks will come to feed, and the hunting in many a locality where there are suitable ponds or streams could be greatly improved were some wild rice sown.

TRAINING A SHEEP DOG.

The First Essential Is to Teach Him to Love You.

If there is anything that a shepherd needs help about it is training a sheep dog, says Professor Arkwick in the American Sheep Breeder.

You want your dog to come to you as a pup not over two months old, as you want him to know no other master than yourself. At two months he will learn his name and pick up simple lessons. It will be well for him to go where the sheep are, but you must not try to teach him to herd them, nor must you let a ewe with a lamb get close enough to make a pass at him. He must not be frightened with sheep.

The first lesson is to teach him to love you. This is easy, if you are gentle with him and will pet him freely.

TWO-YEAR OLD COLLIE SHEEP DOG.

Next, for the collie loves a caress as much as he does his breakfast. Give him a short name and use it often. Speak it softly with the caress and harsh with a rebuke. Whenever you approach his yard or kennel call him to you by saying "Come." You may accompany this with his name or with a whistle, and you must be careful to give him the same whistle always. This is his next lesson. He will soon learn this, and soon you will have the most difficult lesson of all to give. This is to teach him to obey. When you say "Come" he must come to you, and he must know that he is compelled to come whether he desires to do so or not.

Just here you and your pup will have your first battle, and if the victory is yours you are well on the way to successful training. If he refuses to come, go after him and bring him to you, caressing him for some time. Then try it over again. Never let him feel that he is having his way, but avoid making a clear issue with him yet, for he must know punishment first, and you must know what form of punishment will suit the individual dog best.

Some day, after you have taught him what "Come" means, he will deliberately run from you just to test you. Keep your patience now and be willing to take two or three hours off just here. It is worth it. Try as before to bring him by caressing, but he is likely to set his head on disobedience, so you must punish him.

Auto Dairyman.

There was a dairyman's convention recently that brought to Chicago milk producers from the five states immediately tributary to the great Elgin and Wisconsin creamery districts. Of those attending 112 were asked as to the use and value of the automobile to them.

Thirty-eight of them own automobiles and use them constantly in business. Eleven own more than one. They are used in marketing butter fats mainly, but seven used the power to operate separators, one to flush his dairy barn, another to operate his hot tie washer.

The roads in the creamery district are better than the average country roads, and the automobile most used is a late type, with a tonneau that can be removed, leaving a flat platform for freight.

Contagious and Fatal.

Anthrax is a contagious and fatal disease. An animal so afflicted may, without having shown any sign of disease, drop down in the pasture and die in convulsions in a very short time, or an animal may be apparently well at night and be found dead in the morning. It stops feeding or ruminating a few hours before death. It is then taken with chills and fever, and if its temperature be taken it will be found to be exceedingly high. The treatment for anthrax is useless. The only thing to do is to prevent the balance of the herd from becoming affected. This is done by vaccinating them and injecting vaccine under the skin with a hypodermic syringe, the results of which are very good.—Dr. David Roberts.

Profit From Sows.

If there is a more profitable breeding animal on a farm than a good sow I have not found it, says a writer in the Breeder's Gazette, Chicago. She has not the habits or makeup to interest all stockmen. So long as the world cannot be fed without pork the sow and her product will be objects of interest to the farming world.

It is a sad commentary on the methods of swine growers that 50 per cent or more of pigs fattened perish in infancy. It is not reasonable to suppose such a cutting down of the legitimate profits of the business is necessary. Like too many other losses in stock growing, it is largely preventable.

Alfalfa For Sheep.

Alfalfa and sheep go together just as naturally as ducks and water. Alfalfa as a feed has proved beyond doubt that it is far ahead of any other roughage for sheep. All over the west alfalfa is an indispensable factor in winter feeding, and so well do sheep thrive on it that eastern farmers are taking it up after waiting fifty years for the west to set the pace.

BUTTER FAT PRICES.

A community not far from where the writer lives has had an experience of late in the matter of prices received for cream sent to centralizer and local creameries that ought to offer a suggestion to dairymen who may be tempted to desert the home creamery because of higher prices offered temporarily by the centralizer plant for the purpose of killing competition. During the latter part of August, the time when the comparison of prices was made, a local creamery was paying 25 1/2 cents per pound for butter fat, while the centralizer stations in towns

DIRT ROAD IMPROVER

Wonderful Change Made by Using the Split Log Drag.

DIRECT, EFFECTIVE RESULTS.

Dragging a Road When Muddy Fills in Ruts and Closes Up Uneven Spaces—Persistent Use of Drag Will Soon Make a Smooth, Hard Surface.

It has been said that only 10 per cent of the roads in the entire United States are the main traveled highways. The other 90 per cent are the common, everyday country dirt roads. In the ordinary discussion regarding road improvement our thoughts and energies so frequently lead us to the discussion of macadamized roads, brick, stone and other specially constructed roadbeds that the vast majority of our dirt roads are lost sight of. We talk about necessity for road rollers and road scrapers, rock crushers and various other essential roadmaking devices, and then when we figure out the cost of such roads at from $3,000 to $15,000 per mile we oftentimes wonder how many generations it will take for our dirt roads to be adequately maintained, according to the best systems. Because of the utter hopelessness of getting macadamized or other expensive improved roads in his locality in Missouri a man named D. Ward King built a drag out of a log split in half some thirteen years ago, and after every rain, while the mud was soft, he drove up and down the road in front of his farm for half a mile, pulling the drag at an angle of forty-five degrees. Such marvelous improvement resulted from the use of this primitive device that scientific investigation by road engineers has been instigated, and the matter has now passed beyond the experimental or guesswork stage.

The 90 per cent of our dirt roads in the United States, properly dragged after a rain, can be made almost as satisfactory during the greater part of the year as expensively hard surfaced highways and at a ridiculously small cost per mile, carrying from $5 to $100. In the light of the impossibility of macadamizing all our 2,000,000 miles of roads in the United States in one generation or even in any limited period of time, and in the light of the effective and immediate results obtained from dragging the highways, the study of this method can be followed with much profit.

First of all, dragging a road when muddy fills in the ruts, closes up uneven spaces and makes a smooth surface. Of course traffic over such a road will immediately proceed to cut it up again. However, as the dragging is persisted in and the mud is worked into a clay-like mass and becomes dry it likewise becomes hard. Eventually the top of the road presents a resistant, shell-like cake of tough mud as hard as unburnt brick.

After a time it will be noticed that a road that has been dragged will become dry much sooner than neglected stretches of road in the same neighborhood. The more attention given to dragging a road the quicker will it dry out ahead of its neighbors. Eventually after several years of persistent dragging the mud shell on the surface of such a road will become so hard that even after a cloudburst of rain a pick will with difficulty be made to penetrate the surface for over two inches.

By the skilled use of the drag the road can be made high in the middle. The average neglected country road is usually hollow in the middle and after a rain has small lakes and pools standing over its surface, sometimes for many days and weeks. But the dragged road, having such a crown, sheds water into the side gutters.

These facts to the uninitiated or skeptical may on first impression seem far-fetched or exaggerated, but they are facts based on the experience of reputable men from Missouri to New York state who have been dragging the country dirt roads after every rain.

The roads today in many sections of the United States are no better than they were fifty years ago, even with the labor and money that have been expended upon them. In some localities almost the entire amount of the tax is expended in temporary work, while nothing is spent for permanent improvement, with the result that conditions remain unchanged. The sooner we can get a system of road dragging inaugurated in every community the sooner will we have the 90 per cent of our neglected dirt roads adequately and permanently improved throughout the greater part of the year in the United States.—Donald McCaskey, M. D.

Needless Wear of Roads by Autos.

A county surveyor protests against the habit which many motorists have of doing the majority of their driving on the crown or center of the road. This method of driving means that one portion of the road takes all the wear and naturally, of course, gets worn into ruts and ridges. If the traffic would spread itself and make all that portion of the road from gutter to the top of the crown take a share of the wear, road surfaces would last much longer and would require less frequent repair. In these days when roads are made almost flat there is no excuse for this habit of clinging to the crown, but where roads are made with a great deal of camber it is perhaps excusable, as driving on a continuous slope is the reverse of pleasant.

less than forty miles away were paying but 22 cents, a difference of 6 1/2 cents per pound. Were the conditions under which cream is marketed in the country investigated a like discrepancy in price would likely be found to exist. Of course the centralizer plant often pays a higher price than the local co-operative or private creamery, but it is only for the purpose of running such opponents out of business. When they have matters in their own hands they pay as little as they please and let disgruntled patrons whistle if they aren't satisfied with the size of their monthly cream checks.

HOW HE GOT OUT OF THE DEBTORS' PRISON

By THOMAS BARBER JUDSON.
(Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.)

It was visitors' day at Ludlow street jail, New York. Ludlow street jail is a very gentle counterpart of the debtors' prison of the olden time. Its inmates are those in contempt of the inheritance and certain other courts, federal bankrupts, execution and judgment debtors and breach of promise and alimony men.

John Decker had finished his breakfast of rolls, coffee and an egg—he could have breakfasted more heartily had he been able to order from a neighboring restaurant—and was sitting in the lounging room reading a morning paper when a card was handed him. He looked at it, frowned and said:

"I understood when I was put in here that no prisoner was obliged to see his wife. Tell the sheriff that I claim the immunity promised."

The message was delivered, and presently the sheriff himself appeared.

"Your wife says, Mr. Decker, that she has come with the olive branch, and she told me to say in case you declined to receive her that she has your son Johnny with her and wishes to know if you will see him."

The hard lines on Decker's face relaxed.

"Yes, if you will bring him in here," The sheriff retired, and in a few minutes a boy of six came bounding into the room and, springing into his father's arms, covered his face with kisses. They were returned in kind, while a tear stood in the man's eye.

"Mamma gave me a message for you, papa. She says she was told that you were hiding money."

"Who told her that?"

"Mrs. Spiffle."

"That Jeezbell! She made all the trouble."

"And mamma says I was sick and baby was sick, and she was turned out of the rooms, and nothing to buy meat or medicines, and—"

"The man put his hand on the boy's mouth

"Never mind all that, Johnny. I can't bear it."

"And mamma says she's been studying stenography and has got a place. She doesn't wish you to stay here any longer."

"What does she wish me to do?"

"First to forgive her for putting you in here."

"What next?"

"I wish you to come home."

"Johnny, dear, I wish I could do both, but I can do neither."

"Not for me, poppy? Please do—just for me, you know."

"Very well; I'll do the first for you."

"And you'll come home?"

"No; I can't do that."

"Oh, pop, please do!"

"There will be time enough to consider that in the future."

"No, there won't. Mamma says—But I wasn't to tell you."

"Tell me what?"

"That it'll be too late then."

"Oh, it will be too late! In other words, she must decide just when a reconciliation may take place."

"What's that?"

"Make it up."

"No, that isn't it. I know why, but I won't tell. Mamma says you're so proud. That's gone reason."

"I don't understand, Johnny."

"Mamma says if I tell you'll never come home. You must come home without knowing."

The father studied the boy's face meaningfully for a time and at last said:

"Well, Johnny, I could never refuse you anything. I'll forgive your mother for putting me in here, and I'll come home, wherever that may be. I suppose it's in a dirty garret. But tell your mother that I won't permit her to do the work for the family. I know where I can get $10 a week as porter. It's pretty hard to take such a place after having employed a hundred men myself, but I've learned that what can't be cured must be endured."

"Oh, poppy!" The boy threw his arms spasmodically around his father's neck, gave him a quick hug and kiss, jumped down and ran away to announce the success of his mission.

It was several days after this before the red tape that held John Decker in prison for not paying his wife her alimony was cut and he walked out a free man. The hour was 5 in the afternoon. Boarding an elevated train, he started for an address unknown that had been given him as the abode of his wife and children. Leaving the train he passed down a cross street. Coming to the number that had been given him as his family abode, he concluded there had been a mistake. The place was a handsome apartment house. At the elevator he asked the uniformed boy if he knew where Mrs. Decker lived.

"Fifth floor," replied the boy.

Wonderingly the ex-prisoner entered the elevator, and when it stopped Johnny's eyes were glistening through the grating. In another moment a reunited family were clinging in one embrace.

Mrs. Decker's money had been invested in her husband's business. One of the largest debtors to the firm who had contributed principally to the fall ure had astonished Mrs. Decker by paying her his debt, a fortune in itself. She wisely brought about a reconciliation with her husband before he knew that she was independent knowing that after he was aware of it his position would be very different.

There followed a happy reunion dinner.

Strippings Come Last.

Any farmer who can tell you about "strippings" when it comes to milking a cow. They are the rich milk which is drawn last. The idea has been advanced that all milk from the cow is alike, but this is a mistake.

The popular idea that the first milk drawn is poorest in cream, or butter fat, is correct. The last milk drawn is usually about five times as rich as the first. It is an old custom on the farm to set this milk to itself on account of its extra richness. If any goes to the calf it is the first milk drawn, and that is highly valuable for butter. On this account the old way is to let the calf suck first. It is a very old plan to leave the last milk to the calf.

Popular ideas and science agree with regard to the value of "strippings." The New York experiment station made a test of the matter in the case of five cows. Every pint as drawn was tested, and the amount of butter fat increased regularly to the thirtieth pint, which was about five times as rich as the first, as already stated. Every buttermaker will save the "stripplings" as if they were pure gold.

TRAINING A SHEEP DOG.

The First Essential Is to Teach Him to Love You.

If there is anything that a shepherd needs help about it is training a sheep dog, says Professor Arbuckle in the American Sheep Breeder.

You want your dog to come to you as a pup not over two months old, as you want him to know no other master than yourself. At two months he will learn his name and pick up simple lessons. It will be well for him to go where the sheep are, but you must not try to teach him to herd them, nor must you let a ewe with a lamb get close enough to make a pass at him. He must not be frightened with sheep.

The first lesson is to teach him to love you. This is easy, if you are gentle with him and will pet him freely.

TWO-YEAR-OLD COLLIE SHEEP DOG.

quently, for the collie loves a caress as much as he does his breakfast. Give him a short name and use it often. Speak it softly with the caress and harsh with a rebuke. Whenever you approach his yard or kennel call him to you by saying "Come." You may accompany this with his name or with a whistle, and you must be careful to give him the same whistle always. This is his next lesson. He will soon learn this, and soon you will have the most difficult lesson of all to give. This is to teach him to obey. When you say "Come" he must come to you, and he must know that he is compelled to come whether he desires to do so or not.

Just here you and your pup will have your first battle, and if the victory is yours you are well on the way to successful training. If he refuses to come, go after him and bring him to you, caressing him for some time. Then try it over again. Never let him feel that he is having his way, but avoid making a clear issue with him yet, for he must know punishment first, and you must know what form of punishment will suit the individual dog best. Some day, after you have taught him what "Come" means, he will deliberately run from you just to test you. Keep your patience now and be willing to take two or three hours off just here. It is worth it. Try as before to bring him by caressing, but he is likely to set his head on disobedience, so you must punish him.

Auto Dairyman.

There was a dairyman's convention recently that brought to Chicago milk producers from the five states immediately tributary to the great Elgin and Wisconsin creamery districts. Of those attending 112 were asked as to the use and value of the automobile to them.

Thirty-eight of them own automobiles and use them constantly in business. Eleven own more than one. They are used in marketing butter fats mainly, but seven used the power to operate separators, one to flush his dairy barn, another to operate his bottle washer.

The roads in the creamery district are better than the average country roads, and the automobile most used is a late type, with a tonneau that can be removed, leaving a flat platform for freight.

Contagious and Fatal.

Anthrax is a contagious and fatal disease. An animal so afflicted may, without having shown any sign of disease, drop down in the pasture and die in convulsions in a very short time, or an animal may be apparently well at night and be found dead in the morning. It stops feeding or ruminating a few hours before death is taken with chills and fever, and if its temperature be taken it will be found to be exceedingly high. The treatment for anthrax is useless. The only thing to do is to prevent the balance of the herd from becoming affected. This is done by vaccinating them and injecting vaccine under the skin with a hypodermic syringe, the results of which are very good.—Dr. David Roberts.

Profit From Sows.

If there is a more profitable breeding animal on a farm than a good sow I have not found it, says a writer in the Breeder's Gazette, Chicago. She has not the habits or makeup to interest all stockmen. So long as the world cannot be fed without pork the sow and her product will be objects of interest to the farming world.

It is a sad commentary on the methods of swine growers that 50 per cent or more of pigs farrowed perish in infancy. It is not reasonable to suppose such a cutting down of the legitimate profits of the business is necessary. Like too many other losses in stock growing, it is largely preventable.

Alfalfa For Sheep.

Alfalfa and sheep go together just as naturally as ducks and water. Alfalfa as a feed has proved beyond doubt that it is far ahead of any other roughage for sheep. All over the west alfalfa is an indispensable factor in winter feeding, and so well do sheep thrive on it that eastern farmers are taking it up after waiting fifty years for the west to get the idea.

BUTTER FAT PRICES.

A community not far from where the writer lives has had an experience of late in the matter of prices received for cream sent to centralizer and local creameries that ought to offer a suggestion to dairymen who may be led to desert the home creamery because of higher prices offered temporarily by the centralizer plant for the purpose of killing competition. During the latter part of August, the time when the comparison of prices was made, a local creamery was paying 28 1/2 cents per pound for butter fat, while the centralizer stations in towns

DIRT ROAD IMPROVER

Wonderful Change Made by Using the Split Log Drag.

DIRECT, EFFECTIVE RESULTS.

It has been said that only 10 per cent of the roads in the entire United States are the main traveled highways. The other 90 per cent are the common, everyday country dirt roads. In the ordinary discussion regarding road improvement our thoughts and energies so frequently lead us to the discussion of macadamized roads, brick, stone and other specially constructed roadbeds that the vast majority of our dirt roads are lost sight of. We talk about necessity for road rollers and road scrapers, rock crushers and various other essential roadmaking devices, and then when we figure out the cost of such roads at from $3,000 to $15,000 per mile we oftentimes wonder how many generations it will take for our dirt roads to be adequately maintained, according to the best systems. Because of the utter hopelessness of getting macadamized or other expensive improved roads in his locality in Missouri a man named D. Ward King built a drag out of a log split in half some thirteen years ago, and after every rain, while the mud was soft, he drove up and down the road in front of his farm for half a mile, pulling the drag at an angle of forty-five degrees. Such marvelous improvement resulted from the use of this primitive device that scientific investigation by road engineers has been instigated, and the matter has now passed beyond the experimental or guesswork stage.

The 90 per cent of our dirt roads in the United States, properly dragged after a rain, can be made almost as satisfactory during the greater part of the year as expensively hard surfaced highways and at a ridiculously small cost per mile, carrying from $5 to $100. In the light of the impossibility of macadamizing all our 2,000,000 miles of roads in the United States in one generation or even in any limited period of time, and in the light of the effective and immediate results obtained from dragging the highways, the study of this method can be followed with much profit.

First of all, dragging a road when muddy fills in the ruts, closes up uneven spaces and makes a smooth surface. Of course traffic over such a road will immediately proceed to cut it up again. However, as the dragging is persisted in and the mud is worked into a clay-like mass and becomes dry it likewise becomes hard. Eventually the top of the road presents a resistant, shell-like cake of tough mud as hard as unburnt brick.

After a time it will be noticed that a road that has been dragged will become dry much sooner than neglected stretches of road in the same neighborhood. The more attention given to dragging a road the quicker will it dry out ahead of its neighbors. Eventually after several years of persistent dragging the mud shell on the surface of such a road will become so hard that even after a cloudburst of rain a pick will with difficulty be made to penetrate the surface for over two inches.

By the skilled use of the drag the road can be made high in the middle. The average neglected country road is usually hollow in the middle and after a rain has small lakes and pools standing over its surface, sometimes for many days and weeks. But the dragged road, having such a crown, sheds water into the side gutters.

These facts to the uninitiated or skeptical may on first impression seem farfetched or exaggerated, but they are facts based on the experience of reputable men from Missouri to New York state who have been dragging the country dirt roads after every rain.

The roads today in many sections of the United States are no better than they were fifty years ago, even with the labor and money that have been expended upon them. In some localities almost the entire amount of the tax is expended in temporary work, while nothing is spent for permanent improvement, with the result that conditions remain unchanged. The sooner we can get a system of road dragging inaugurated in every community the sooner will we have the 90 per cent of our neglected dirt roads adequately and permanently improved throughout the greater part of the year in the United States.—Donald McCaskey, M. D.

Needless Wear of Roads by Autos.

A county surveyor protests against the habit which many motorists have of doing the majority of their driving on the crown or center of the road. This method of driving means that one portion of the road takes all the wear and naturally, of course, gets worn into ruts and ridges. If the traffic would spread itself and make all that portion of the road from gutter to the top of the crown take a share of the wear, road surfaces would last much longer and would require less frequent repair. In these days when roads are made almost flat there is no excuse for this habit of clinging to the crown, but where roads are made with a great deal of camber it is perhaps excusable, as driving on a continuous slope is the reverse of pleasant.

less than forty miles away were paying but 22 cents, a difference of 6 1/2 cents per pound. Were the conditions under which cream is marketed in the country investigated a like discrepancy in price would quite likely be found to exist. Of course the centralizer plant often pays a higher price than the local co-operative or private creamery, but it is only for the purpose of running such opponents out of business. When they have matters in their own hands they pay as little as they please and let disgruntled patrons whistle if they aren't satisfied with the size of their monthly cream checks.
